“Making a difference in learning”

Professional development sessions conducted throughout the Northeast United States. Sessions are not “stand up and deliver” sessions but instead are modeled in the same manner we would like the educator to use in their classrooms. At the end of a long hard day, professionals deserve to move into an environment where they can learn in a fun and rewarding environment. They are certain to leave the session with new skills and achieve that critical “Ah-ha” factor

Schools may elect to receive professional development as a standalone session or sessions with subsequent in-classroom sessions to assist and work directly with the educators. Both way, sessions are tailored to the needs of the school district and pricing is often much cheaper than competitor rates leaving the budget open for other opportunities. Visit the website today at <http://TCCID.Dover.Net> (no www). I am sure you will share the vision of active learning so critical in our schools today.
